

Lesson 4: geographical double-paged spread

So today is a double-paged, spread activity. As it says on our blog, make sure your work is neat, creative and that you keep it safe to bring back into school when you return.

Create an informative double-page on the geography aspects of ancient Egypt. Use the maps and information from the previous two theme lessons and any other interesting facts you can research and find. You could include facts about: Egypt's continent, actual size of Egypt, location in relation to the Equator, facts on the the River Nile, deserts, land use, old names of towns/areas around in 3000-500 B.C.E, population numbers, countries that border Egypt, to name a few.

Think about and plan your layout, choice of fonts, colouring, size of your facts and images on your page. Showcase your knowledge and what you have learnt.
